

Nature, as we have understood it, is going through transformation, reshaping itself in response to increasingly harsh environment. Organisms are adaptating on a mollecular level to survive in altered climate.

P 4 571

